Mr. Lincoln has certainly acted very strangely, and for very strange motives, toward General McClellan. Very recently he signified, through a member of his Cabinet, to McClellan that if he would withdraw from the canvass for the Presidency, he (Lincoln) would assign him to an important command.

He gave out the reason for McClellan's removal, his incompetency, or at least his friends do. To be told that a "first aspirant," however, he will risk the army of the country, and the country itself in a measure, in his hands.

Earlier than this, however, we had the same weak or unworthy motives governing the President. When he was engaged in depleting McClellan's army at the dictation of the radicals, with the Secretary of War at their head, knowing that it would be dangerous or fatal, he was continually writing miserable letters of excuse and apology to McClellan, of which the following is the tenor: "If you knew the full pressure of the case, I am confident you would justify it."

The full pressure was as we have said, and in obedience to it he was willing to overthrow plans deliberately entered into, and to which he supposed he was pledged. The safety and success of the campaign were at stake, and the plan should be sustained; but so, the Abolitionists, with no plan of their own, were resolved to break down McClellan, and they used the President to effect their purpose, and after all his apologies for the dreadful results of yielding, is excused on account of the "pressure" of these traitors.

Is the war a success? We do not mean are our armies successful in winning great, and in a military point of view, decisive battles. We mean is the war a success in bringing about the restoration of the Union? If so, what State has really been brought back to the fold? Not Louisiana, with its one representative in Congress; not Virginia, which even a radical Congress would not so far acknowledge as to allow it to have one Representative in Congress; not Tennessee, which has been in the almost undisputed charge of Governor Johnson, an enemy of the Administration. It has not called a Legislature or sent Congressmen. The State is in so completely an unsatisfactory condition that even Johnson has not attempted this.

The only section that can be so claimed by any possibility is West Virginia, and that is constructed out of the fragment of a State. It is a further fact that, although it has representatives, it was not won back by the Presidential policy, but by McClellan; and if the credit of it reflects upon any one it must be upon him, and it proves anything, by the striking contrast, it proves the way, as conducted by the President, is a failure, while the policy of conciliation adopted by McClellan has met with some success.

How long, Tennessee is not yet in the Union by any representative, will it be before the other ten States will return; and what is the use of wasting the bravery and blood of our soldiers in what brings no valuable result whatever? This is the question.

The Abolitionists may be laughing before they are out of the woods. They belong to a crowd that gets glorious news at first and sorry accounts at the winding up. We know that they have not scrupled to do anything that would win. What would otherwise be unconstitutional may become lawful by becoming indispensable, so says Mr. Lincoln, and his party support it and act on it. They talk of the corrupt Democracy. The Democrats do not profess to be any better than they ought to be, and hence they are the more to be trusted.

The Abolitionists make great professions of patriotism and goodness. As usual, all these qualities exist only in words. The self-righteous man is great on pretensions, and equally great in vice. No party in this country ever approximated the Abolition party in corruption of all sorts, defalcations, swindlings, stealings and so complicated that an exposure would be an appalling task.

The general theory is, that the rebels may do something. They may spoil the Phillips at discretion, and it is rather a virtue. If necessary to carry elections, what may they not do? They are the only party, and shall the patriots be defeated? Can it be allowed? Is not anything right that is done to beat their wicked opponents? The Abolitionists, have a right to rule. If a minority in numbers, they are the majority in righteousness, and a little or a good deal of pious fraud to

THE RAID INTO VIRGINIA.

Particulars of the Burbridge Expedition—The Battle of Sandy, Oct. 2—The Return of the Troops.

(Correspondence Cincinnati Commercial.)
Prominent among the distinctive features which characterize this war is the fact, a term which is applied to the brilliant and dashingly successful, have given such prominence to the cavalry arm of the Federal service. Stoneman, Grierson, Kilpatrick, Russell and a host of other leaders of the "lightning" have achieved all the results of a system of campaign; striking at a place and time when the enemy was not expecting it, and moving camp with a rapidity and boldness which have given the enemy the impression of the impetuosity of their movements, and the result of a system of campaign.

The recent raid of Gen. Burbridge across the mountains into Virginia has added another brilliant chapter to the history of the war, and has been a complete success in every particular. Some of the above referred to, must ever stand as a example of what energy, dash, and invincible bravery can accomplish.

To one unacquainted with the almost trackless routes of Eastern Kentucky and Western Virginia, no account can give a safe idea of the stupendous labor which such an undertaking involves. To move a column of mounted men, with their horses, and their arms, and their supplies, through a country where the only roads are the paths of the wild beasts, where the only bridges are the logs of the forest, and where the only food is the fruit of the forest, is a task of no small magnitude.

A TERRIBLE CATASTROPHE.

Loss of the Revenue Cutter Winslow—Four Persons Drowned—The Boat a Total Loss.

Another catastrophe with loss of life must be added to the large number that have occurred on Lake Erie during the present season of navigation, and within the vicinity of Cleveland. The revenue cutter (formerly tug) Winslow, was last night wrecked on the pier east of our harbor, and four lives lost. The particulars of the disaster are as follows:

Shows fitted out in Buffalo, and was on her first cruise, under command of Capt. O. H. Winslow. The Winslow carried a crew of twenty-seven men, including officers. Her armament consisted of one ten pound rifled gun, and the necessary small arms.

She arrived here a day or two ago, and yesterday afternoon left for a cruise down the lake. She was blown from the pier by a heavy wind, and was driven into the pier, and was driven into the pier, and was driven into the pier.
